<sup>1</sup> The birthdate of Kenneth (Kiprop) Kipkemai KEN was misreported as 5.8.94 but is apparently 2.8.84, so his 59:11 Half Marathon (den Haag, 11 Mar 12) is not shown here as a world under-20 best. Similarly Dennis (Kipruto) Kimetto (Koech) KEN was variously reported to have been born on 13.11.93 or 22.1.94, but the compiler understands that 22.1.84 is his correct birthdate. Therefore his 59:14 Half Marathon (Berlin, 1 Apr 12) should also not be regarded as a world under-20 best

WORLD ATHLETICS
HALF MARATHON
CHAMPIONSHIPS
GDYNIA 2020

PROGRESSION OF WORLD ROAD RECORDS & BEST PERFORMANCES

(Up to Half Marathon, as at October 13, 2020)

+ = en route performance. Ratified marks are shown in bold

Road running marks were accepted by World Athletics as world bests from January 1, 2003, with such marks evolving into world records from January 1, 2004. From November 1, 2011 World Athletics specified that "world records in road races for women [were] to be recognised in women only races", though before that rule was enforced it was decided not to apply it in retrospect, so all existing world records (set in mixed races) remained standing. From November 1, 2013 it was agreed that World Athletics would separately ratify the best marks in single sex (i.e. women only) road running races. Therefore two progressions are shown here when relevant, the main/mixed marks in the first list, and a women's only supplement starting with the first eligible performance at the event.

A women-mixed race record will be ratified even if it is inferior to the equivalent women-only mark. As explained on page 43, the World Athletics Council in 2017 agreed to discontinue World Athletics records at 15Km and 20Km (plus 25Km & 30Km), but add ones for the 5Km set from January 1, 2018

Listed is the progression of world bests prior to official acceptance. Indented are unratified marks or those set on uncertified or unaided courses which do not fulfil the criteria specified in World Athletics Competition Rule 31.21.2 (separation between start and finish points should not be more than 50% of race distance) or 31.21.3 (the decrease in elevation should not be greater than one in a thousand).
